

Meghan Skelton is an appellate attorney in the Maryland Federal Defender's Office. She has also been both a trial and appellate attorney in the Federal Public Defender's Office for the Eastern District of Virginia, an associate at Vinson & Elkins focusing on white collar criminal defense, and an appellate attorney in the Department of Justice Attorney General's Honors Program. She has tried a handful of jury and bench trials, but her practice has always focused on appeals. Although most have been in the Fourth Circuit, she has also argued in the First, Second, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Circuits. In recent years, her practice has focused on the intersection of new technologies and the Fourth Amendment. She leads the law and technology committee in the Federal Defender's Office for the District of Maryland. She has an AB from Duke University and a JD from William and Mary, Order of the Coif.
